How to Stop Drinking Alcohol in the New Year

The problem with New Year resolutions is that people tend to give up on them by the time February comes. It takes a real effort to make such resolutions and stick to them. These are some tips for increasing the likelihood of staying away from alcohol in the New Year:

- * Those who have been abusing alcohol for a long time they may be at risk of withdrawal symptoms. It is recommended that heavy drinkers seek medical advice before going through withdrawals alone.
- * Heavy drinkers may find that they need support when giving up alcohol. Not only are there fellowships such as Alcoholics Anonymous, but also online communities offering support to anyone trying to quit alcohol.
- * Many individuals have found that practices such as mindfulness meditation can be a great help when giving up alcohol.
- * Keeping a journal can be a good idea for anyone who is attempting to quit alcohol. This not only a way of tracing progress, but it can also keep the individual committed to their goal. Looking back over their journal entries can remind them of their hopes and dreams for the future.
- * If people are coming from a serious alcohol addiction, attending rehab may be the best way to ensure success in their recovery. An inpatient program will give the individual the opportunity to stay in an environment that is conducive to escaping addiction.
- * Giving up alcohol will often mean saying goodbye to or spending much less time with drinking buddies. In order to increase your chances of success, it helps to find sober friends and spend more time with them.
- * If people normally spend a great deal of time drinking, they will suddenly have an excessive amount of time on their hands when they become sober. It is therefore vital that the individual develop new hobbies and interests that do not involve alcohol.

Q: What's the difference between an alcoholic and a drunk?

A: A drunk doesn't have to go to all those meetings.
