Five Practices for Staying Sober During the Holidays (or anytime)

1. Maintain Your Recovery Routine

Be sure to stay on your schedule as best you can. The holidays can throw schedules into chaos. Be mindful to keep your 12 step meeting schedule, church if you attend, and self-care routine including meditations or workouts. Keeping your daily routine on track will help you stay focused on recovery. Stay connected to your sponsor and recovery community.

2. Pass on Triggering Events

Office parties, family gatherings, neighborhood celebrations, New Year's Eve with friends – your first go-round of staying sober during the holidays may require you to skip annual events that involve open bars or a heavy focus on alcohol consumption. You are free to skip a year and focus on yourself, specifically on your health and well-being. The best way to manage triggers is to avoid them altogether, especially early in recovery. Keep building on your recovery foundation and reevaluate the party invites next year.

3. Have a Holiday Party Plan

If you do attend a party where drinks are served, prepare yourself for the event. Walk through potential party scenarios and how you will react. Plan your arrival and departure, who you will spend time with – and who you will not. Bring your own or select a festive nonalcoholic option and have an exit or even escape strategy if you start to feel anxious. Make sure you have your own transportation so that you can leave quickly if you feel uncomfortable. Having a plan will help you stay focused on your desired outcome – staying sober during the holidays.

4. Communicate with Loved Ones

Share with your family and friends so they can help and support your recovery. A supportive family can make the difference between recovery and relapse. Family members may need to get involved in their own recovery from codependency.

5. Lend a Helping Hand

Skip the party and head out to help others. There are countless opportunities to serve your community during the holidays. Homeless shelters, recovery programs, community toy drives – volunteer to help others this season and stay out of your head. Use the opportunity to engage deeper into your AA or recovery support group. Keep a check on your sober friends and offer support. Do something that is good for humanity and your recovery this season to avoid relapse.

REJECTED AGAIN

I was at a party with sober friends when I met this attractive woman who seemed interested in me, so I asked her out. She politely shrugged and said, "No thanks," which really surprised me.

I asked, "Why, is it my age?" She replied, "No, age doesn't matter."

"Well then," I asked, "is it my religion?" She said, "No, religion doesn't matter either."

Bewildered, I asked, "I don't get it, is it because you're married?" She replied, "No, I'm single."

I was totally perplexed. So I said, "I'm confused. Why won't you go out with me? Is it because I'm sober?"

"No," she said, "it's because I'm sober!"
